A team of horses owned and driven by Mr. Davis, of Franklin township, were frightened by a bicycle, Tuesday, on Arlington street, and ran away. They soon collided with the fence of Conrad Cook—the collision wrecked the carriage and harness, and the team ran on leaving the vehicle behind, otherwise serious injury might have happened to those who were riding in it.

The Indianapolis Sun says: It has been claimed by the defense in the Scott Jackson murder trial that he cannot be connected with the crime. This is true, for the evidence seems to show conclusively that he has never been disconnected with it.

The Scott Jackson trial has gone far enough to clearly indicate that under the law it will be years before the prisoner is executed, if ever. Before the case was a day old, the attorneys for the defense had laid the foundation for legal quibbles that cannot fail to prolong the matter indefinitely. Law, in criminal cases especially, is a great institution. Justice, in the same class of cases, is greater, but it is very, very scarce.

Badly Injured.

On last Tuesday afternoon John W. Robe was quite seriously injured, while en route to his farm, southeast of this city. He was riding on a wagon in which a corn planter was being conveyed to the farm, and when on the Browning hill, on the Mt. Meridian pike road, the team became unmanageable and overturned the wagon. Mr. Robe was thrown to the ground and one of the wheels of the corn planter fell on him, fracturing a rib on the right side and otherwise badly bruising him. He lay by the roadside for a long time before assistance reached him, and it was fully an hour before a conveyance could be procured to bring him to his home in this city. Dr. Bence gave him surgical attention, and found that the fractured rib had penetrated the lung, and it may be a long time before Mr. Robe fully recovers.

Thomas Rosimere, of St. Mary's, is visiting his cousin, L. F. Crawford, and family.

Mrs. J. H. Detrick and daughter are here from California visiting her mother, Mrs. Fry.

James A. Ricketts, the up-to-date jeweler, has the finest jeweler's safe in Putnam county.

The Boston Club met with Miss Adams, on Saturday evening, and it proved an entertaining and enjoyable one. Papers were read by Miss McCoy, on "The Birth Place of American Liberty," and by Miss Emma Jones on "Dorothea Dix."

Died, at the residence of her brother, in this city, on April 28, after a long sickness, Mrs. Margaret Arnett, sister of Sol. Henry, aged 76 years. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. J. H. Hollingsworth.

Daniel T. Darnall and family desire to return sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly gave them aid and assistance through the last sickness of their wife and mother, Mrs. Nancy F. Darnall, and also to express their appreciation of the kind and sympathetic words spoken to them in their grievous bereavement.

A few days ago a tramp called at the residence of Reuben Rogers, in Washington township, and asked for a square meal. On being refused he pulled a pistol and began shooting at Mr. Rogers, but when the latter got his gun to retaliate the tramp took to his heels, and made the fastest sprinting time on record. Fortunately Mr. Rogers escaped injury.

The country is full of impostors and sharpers who are trying to get their living off the earnings of others. This class of fellows who try to work the charity dodge, the secret order scheme, should not be countenanced by our people. Where there is one person traveling that is actually in want and really suffering, there are ten thousand of such vagabonds who are well and hearty that will not work. Our people should stop feeding this class of people and they should stop giving. If you feel like helping any person look around your part of the city and bestow your favors on those whom you know need help and who are worthy of support. The habit of helping strangers and impostors is not a commendable one and our people should draw the line. If a reputable laborer cannot secure work in the town in which he lives, he will certainly fare much worse away from home among strangers.

A. J. Vanlandingham, a former resident of this county, who went into the army as a member of the 43d regiment, is in the hands of U. S. officials, charged with pension fraud, and failing to furnish $1,000 bail is lodged in jail awaiting trial. His wife, whose maiden name was Evans, saw him for the last time in 1863, when he returned to the South to join his regiment. His failure to return convinced her of his death, and she applied for a pension. The facts are, he did not die, but deserted his wife and went to Iowa where he married another woman. He applied for and received a pension because of injuries received in the service, and at a later date his deserted wife applied for a pension as his widow, and this application disclosed the fraud. When he was arrested and confronted with his wronged wife he confessed to fraud in that the injury he was drawing pension for was inflicted when a boy, long years before he entered the army.

The Verdict.

Coroner Ed Kleinbub rendered his verdict in the case of Elijah Mannan, who was found dead in his residence, in Cloverdale township, on April 23, 1896. The Coroner's finding says: "After careful examination of the body, and having heard the evidence, I find that the deceased came to his death by violence self-inflicted; I found upon the body one mortal gun shot wound, inflicted by the deceased himself."

TRICKY SHOPPERS.

Ladies Who Rob the Millinery Stores of Designs.

"That lady didn't come here to buy; her 'maid' is a small dressmaker, and she's after designs; I know her."

This was the remark of a saleslady in one of the large shopping stores, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, and, on being asked for an explanation, she said:

"It is quite a customary thing for so-called ladies to go shopping with their maids, not with the remotest intention of buying anything, but with the purpose of seeing the latest fashions and copying them at home afterward. Ladies will sometimes get these 'small dressmakers' to accompany them on these thieving expeditions; then, with their heads crumpled of the most delicious notions, his straight to some cheap mart, buy silks, velvets and other materials needed, and 'dish up' exact counterparts of the models they have seen."

"When it is considered that for Paris models leading firms often pay a big price for each gown, it will be seen that a direct infringement of the copyright, so to speak, is most disastrous to them. It is the custom of firms who have been taken in in this way to keep what they call their 'exclusive models' strictly secret. These are never shown in the windows, and are only brought forward to customers who are well known and trusted."

IN THE STREET CAR.

Some Observing Individual Notes a Woman's Eccentricity.

"Have you ever noticed," said a man-about-town to a reporter for the Philadelphia Record, "that nine women out of ten when they enter a street car invariably take a seat on the right-hand side of the car? I have frequently wondered at it, and a solution of the mystery did not occur to me until a few nights ago. I boarded a Girard avenue car which was entirely empty, and sat down in the forward left-hand corner. At the next crossing a woman got aboard and sat down opposite me. At the next street two more women got in and took seats alongside of the first. After a time there were seven women in the car, all sitting in a row, leaving me to enjoy alone the comforts of the left-hand seats. Then three men jumped aboard and sat down on my side. Finally another woman joined us, and instead of taking a vacant seat near the door on the 'ladies' side' she walked the entire length of the car and sat down alongside of me. This eccentricity on her part impelled me to watch her more closely than good manners possibly warranted, but I solved the mystery to my satisfaction. She paid the conductor with her left hand! She was left-handed; see? And all the women on the other side were right-handed, of course. Fact!"

Well and Truly Said.

Over the triple doorway of the cathedral of Milan there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend: "All that pleases is but for a moment." Over another is sculptured a cross and these are the words underneath: "All that troubles is but for a moment." But underneath the great central entrance in the main aisle is the inscription: "That only is important which is eternal."

THE SHIPPING OF ANIMALS.

Cattle on Ocean Voyages to Receive the Best of Care and Attention.

The improvement in the arrangements made for the protection of animals during the voyage across the Atlantic are said by Mr. Tennan, principal of the animals division of the board of agriculture, to have fairly kept pace with the increase of the trade. During the early days, according to the London News, the losses, owing to tempestuous weather, bad ventilation and other causes, were often of a very serious character, and in some cases resulted in the destruction of the entire living cargo. As experience was gained, however, an improvement took place, and since the year 1859, when the losses among cattle amounted to no less than 21 of every thousand that were embarked, there has been a steady decrease in the mortality among this class of animals, until, in 1893, it was reduced to three per thousand, and during the year 1894 to five per thousand. Sheep are at all times bad travelers when compared with cattle, the losses among them during a long journey being almost always large, and during the five years in question the average losses amounted to 23 per thousand. Notwithstanding the fact, however, that the importation during 1894 increased nearly eight-fold, and leaped up to upward of 400,000, the losses during the past year only amounted to 17 per thousand.

LEFT-HANDED PARROTS.

Curious Observation of One Who Has Much to Do with Animals.

Superintendent Sol Stephan, of the Cincinnati Zoo, has made all sorts of curious discoveries in the habits and characteristics of animals, the latest of which, says the Enquirer, is that wild creatures are mostly left-handed. Mr. Stephan has been endeavoring to verify this observation on two parrots lately brought from Mexico. He found that in grasping a finger offered as a perch, the parrots almost always put the left foot forward.

Usually the finger thus offered is that of the right hand. But when the left finger is offered to the parrots, they put forward the right foot. There is, however, apparently a small residuum of preference for the left foot. This seems to be due to the fact that men are usually right-handed and offer the right hand to the parrot.

The left foot is the one naturally put forward by the parrot in this case, and through repetition of this action a species of left-footedness is induced. Mr. Stephan's general conclusion is that there is no evidence that the parrot is naturally left-footed.

The appearance of that left-footedness is due entirely to the fact that those who offer the finger or food to parrots do so, as a rule, with the right hand. Repetition of this process makes the parrot more or less left-handed in time.

Historical Records of Maryland.

In speaking of the records of the provincial court of the province of Maryland, from 1657 to the revolution, now preserved in Anne Arundel county, the Baltimore Sun says: "The historical value of these old records is inestimable. It is believed that no other state in the union has such records of family history showing the manner of living among the people of the colony as far back as 250 years ago. In the wills, families can be traced back from father to son for a century. The court record books containing inventories of personal estates make a complete exhibit of the character of household furniture, kitchen implements, farm utensils, etc., used by the early settlers and their descendants during the first century and a half of the colony. From these things we can read much of the habits and customs of the people."

A Heartless Experiment.

The Lancet tells this story to show the trials of a country doctor in France. A young physician settled in a commune, whose paupers he attended for ten dollars per annum. One night, soon after his arrival at this Eldorado, he received an urgent summons to visit a patient who lived at a distance of six kilometers from the village. On reaching the cottage—it was then 11 p. m.—he found the doors closed and lights extinguished. In reply to his knocks the door was opened by a sturdy peasant, who laughingly informed him that there was no illness in the house, but that his wife had wished to see if, when anyone was ill, he would come if sent for! The unfortunate medico—since dead from overwork, and probably underfeeding—remarked: "I could have felled him to the ground."

An Artistic Compliment.

A hairdresser in Boston numbered among her patrons many gentlemen of the medical profession. One day when operating upon one of them he broke forth in great glee: "Vat you dink, dogtar? I haf been to dot hospital, und vile I wait to go up und cut a man's hair I see marble busts of de dogtors. Dere was Dogtor Stores, und dere was Dogtor Peegelow mit de vig I dress for him dose twenty years, in marble. Dink of dot! Von of my vigs in marble!"

Horses Regular at the Bath.

The horses which are used on the Kennebec rice fields are so accustomed to dropping through the ice that they don't seem to mind it. They are yanked out a little roughly, to be sure, but they take their medicine like the chickens belonging to the family that was constantly moving, which, every time they saw a covered cart stop in front of their house, would turn on their backs and stick their legs into the air to be tied together, ready for transportation.

Another Immense Log Raft.

Preparations are making for building another immense log raft on Puget sound, to be towed by sea to San Francisco. Last year a large raft was towed from the Columbia river to San Francisco and the undertaking was a big success.

AFTER SEA OTTER.

Fleets of Canoes Manned by the Alaska Indians.

The Hoonah Indians are the best sea otter hunters of all the Alaskan tribes. They are very skillful at it, and as the furs are very valuable they make a good thing out of it. The Hoonahs go after sea otters in large companies. Ten or twelve families hunt together. There are very good grounds about ten miles out from Lituya bay, and there the Hoonahs do their best work. They use spruce canoes, which are small compared with most Alaskan canoes, and which, being light and easy to handle in the chase, are swifter than the ordinary boats. Usually there are four paddlers, but the number may be greater or smaller. The head of the family sits in a position that he can drop the paddle and pick up the gun in a fraction of a second. The mother, as often as not with a baby in her lap, sits in the stern with a big, long-handled paddle and steers. The children do the effective paddling. Every Alaskan Indian child learns to paddle as soon as it learns to walk. The Indians there have been a canoe-traveling race so long that they inherit abnormally developed bodies and arms, but their legs are not strong.

Because of the great bore in Lituya bay it is only when the weather is very calm that the Indians can go out to hunt sea otter. They kill with shot-guns loaded with heavy charges of buckshot. And they hunt otter in much the same way that the western boys hunt hell divers and butter-ball ducks. When they sight an otter they fire several blank shots. The otter dives, and all the canoes circle around the place where he went down, waiting for him to come to the surface again. When he does they fire more blank shots and scare him into diving again. They keep that up until the otter gets tired out and one of the canoes can get within gunshot of him. Sometimes they have two or three otter diving at once, and it is lively, exciting work, as well as great sport.

Getting back with the day's game to the camp inside the bay is always sharp work and sometimes very dangerous. The bay runs inland about six miles, and varies from three-quarters of a mile to one and a half miles in width. The entrance is about 300 yards wide, with from four to six fathoms of water at low tide. Rocky spits jut out from the mainland at each side. Just at the head of the southern spit are several large boulders, the largest of which is called Cormorant rock. The northern spit is a rocky glacial morass. Vessels going in and out always wait for slack tide. Except at slack tide the breakers extend entirely across the entrance, and when the tide is running either way the current is extremely swift and a gutter is formed in midchannel from which the current sets strongly toward the shores, so that a vessel trying to go through on the tide would almost certainly be washed against Cormorant rock or the northern spit. In perfectly calm weather the tide, ebb or flood, shows a considerable bore, and if a vessel hits it just right she would go through as if sailing down hill. The mouth of the bay is only about a cable's length, and after that there is no danger.

The Indian sea otter hunters never undertake the passage except at slack water. If they arrive before the tide serves they wait until it does. If they get in from the grounds only a few minutes after slack water they prefer to stand the ocean swell outside than undertake to go through in their light canoes. As a matter of fact, they are safer outside, for there is a big eddy between the tideway and Cormorant rock, where they are perfectly safe, unless a wind comes up and the sea gets rough. There they wait for the next turn of the tide, and it is not unusual to see half a dozen canoes drifting about in this eddy with most of the occupants asleep. If the sea comes up while they are waiting outside the Indians make a landing among the rocks on the ocean side rather than try to make a passage through the breakers. This is an extremely hazardous undertaking, but the Indians are so skillful in handling their canoes that accidents seldom happen. They swim like seals from babyhood, and are usually so covered with oil and grease that the shock of sudden immersion in the cold water does not affect them.—N. Y. Sun.

Castors on Stove Legs.

That the use of well-arranged, accurately adjusted rollers is a great saving of labor is undeniable, but not every article should be thus equipped. The notion of putting castors on stove-legs is one that is not likely to receive the indorsement of strictly practical persons. The stove is emphatically a stationary article. One of the great drawbacks to successful and permanent plumbing is the fact that the stove frequently works loose, slides out of place and cracks the couplings or strains the pipes. If this is the case with the stove without casters, it is not difficult to imagine what would be the condition if rollers were attached. This would be a continual source of danger, not only to plumbing, but on account of fires. The pipes would naturally work apart; even the jarring of ordinary wind storms could have this effect, and conflagrations would be the inevitable end of such an invention. The rollers might do well enough if a clamp were attached with teeth to press into the floor after the stove was located; but a simple roller without such an attachment would be a constant menace not only to plumbing, but to the safety of the dwelling as well.—N. Y. Ledger.

GOV. TOM JOHNSON.

A Stubborn Patriot to Whom This Country Owes a Great Debt.

In a storied burial-ground in Frederick, "in his narrow bed," sleeps one whose name never fails to stir the heart of the old Marylander with lively emotions of admiration and affection—Gov. Tom Johnson, that audacious and stubborn patriot, of whom John Adams said that he was one of four citizens of Maryland and Virginia "without whom there would have been no revolution;" although, in affected scorn of him, a British officer, writing to his people at home, had assured them "there is no need to be alarmed by all this noise in the colonies, which is mainly made by a boy named Tom Johnson." "That pestilent rebel" of the British war office, writes John Williamson Palmer in Century, was the trusty, loving friend of Washington, whom he nominated to be commander-in-chief of all the armies of the united colonies; member of the first congress, and of the convention which adopted the constitution of the United States; first governor of Maryland, and an associate justice of the supreme court; and he was twice urged to accept the portfolio of secretary of state. He was in his day the first citizen of Maryland, and in all the colonies the revolution disclosed no wiser, stronger, sweeter character than his who joined the fortitude of the warrior with the foresight of the statesman in the temperament of an eager, dauntless boy.

Iron and Steel.

It is difficult, says a Belgian journal, to distinguish between iron and steel tools. They have the same polish and workmanship; use will commonly show the difference. To make the distinction quickly place the tool upon a stone, and drop upon it some diluted nitric acid (four parts of water to one of acid). If the tool remains clean it is of iron; if of steel, it will show a black spot where touched with the acid. These spots can be easily rubbed off.

An Apt Reply.

The apt replies in the language of compliment claim a literature of their own, but one must serve "pour indiquer les autres." "We shall never forget you," said a queen of society to one of her subjects, who was making his adieu. "Your ladyship has now given me the only inducement not to return."

THE JACKSON-WALLING CASE.

What is Said and Done in Regard to It.

A special from Newport, Ky., says that Scott Jackson is "down" on Sheriff Plummer because he is doing all he can to convict him, and has made affidavit to this effect, in asking that the court order that jurors for the case be summoned by the Coroner of the county. The affidavit says that ever since the arrest of Jackson and Walling Sheriff Plummer "has shown an unusual interest in bringing about the conviction of the defendants. He has frequently, privately to them and publicly when they were not present, denounced them as the guilty parties and has frequently noted that the chain of evidence is complete. He has devoted himself during the greater part of the time since their arrest, to collecting evidence and conferring with attorneys for the prosecution and with Cincinnati detectives. Plummer seems to have detailed himself as a special detective for the purpose of convicting the defendants, and has stated many times that he has expended hundreds of dollars of his own money in so doing, and will succeed in convicting them of the charge."

In an interview with a reporter Jackson is quoted as follows:

"I've heard that Big Four Willie Wood is going to be one of the witnesses for the prosecution."

"What do you mean by Big Four Willie?"

"Oh, that's C. C. C. and I—champion chippy chaser of Indiana. He doesn't know a thing about anybody else but himself. He got stuck on himself some years ago and never fully regained his balance, the dear little angel. What he doesn't know about me would fill a thousand volumes. All he can talk about is the mashes he has made—in his mind. He's a regular peach, and a speckled one at that. If he had his just deserts he would be in this cell I'm now occupying, and I'd be the witness. He's a bird, I don't think. I'm not losing any sleep over either him or the negro Jackson. I've been told that was a sorry looking plug of a horse that he said he drove. I've often heard of Jackson's Best Plug, but I guess this must be Jackson's Worst. If that horse looked anything like the picture I saw I'd be willing to wager that he couldn't drive out that alleged road to Ft. Thomas inside of a week. When he comes to tell the truth about that dream he had it will turn out to be a gingerbread horse hitched to a policy gig. After the paper advertised for a cab driver he waited four weeks before he answered the advertisement. He had sufficient time to pick out half a dozen roads leading there. He knows his business thoroughly. He saw our pictures in the papers; he knew we were in the county jail; and he could easily pick us out as Jackson and Walling."

"Any smart kid could do that. Look at the hundreds that can come right into this building now that can identify us by the pictures in the papers. Why, that George Jackson is a bigger liar than Tom Pepper, that got kicked out of hell for lying. I wouldn't be surprised to hear that he knew who kidnapped Charlie Ross, struck Billy Patterson and bucked the bull off the bridge. If you press him real hard he'll acknowledge that he first invented work, as well as murdered sleep. They say that the animals came out of Noah's ark in pairs. Well, I certainly would enjoy looking at what he came down the plank with. If the witnesses for the prosecution tell the truth, and nothing but the truth, I'll be on easy street, first house down on the sunny side."

"Did I get kicked on the shin? Well, just a slight tap—not sufficient to require a ship-plaster, though. I don't know whether Walling will take the stand in my case or not. I rather wish he would. I saw Pearl Bryan for the last time on Wednesday. I understand that he saw her after I did. Now, if he will take the stand and tell who he turned her over to that will undoubtedly acquit me."

The attorney for Alonzo Walling has been notified to be ready to proceed with the trial May 5. This incident that Judge Helm expects to finish the trial of Scott Jackson in two weeks. It is given out that the prosecution will not call either of the men as a witness against the other, being confident that they already have enough evidence to convict both.

The Jackson Case.

Another piece of evidence is reported from Cincinnati, in the Jackson case, as follows: From information they have secured they are positive that Pearl Bryan was in Bellevue, Ky., Friday, January 31.

On the night of Foertmeyer's drugstore and requested permission to use the telephone. As that instrument is near the prescription desk, the person in charge could be distinctly seen, said. The officers say that Pearl Bryan called up a certain place in Cincinnati and sent a message to Scott Jackson.

The fact that a request to him to not disappoint her but to be sure and come over to Bellevue that night. Another message, was sent from Foertmeyer's drugstore that day to Scott Jackson, by Miss Wagner. The fact that Jackson was to call the following Saturday and bring a friend. This, with other information, the authorities have their positive conviction, that Pearl Bryan spent Thursday night in Bellevue, and at the residence of Dr. Wagner. Mr. Foertmeyer stated to the authorities that on Thursday preceding the finding of the headless body a telephone message was received at his drugstore, from Scott Jackson to Miss Wagner, stating that he would be over that night with Walling.

They are of the opinion that the dental students, being acquainted with Miss Wagner arranged for Pearl Bryan to board at the former's home, and that she did spend the night there. The next day something occurred that made Jackson's presence there imperative, and she accordingly telephoned to him.

The fact that Miss Bryan was at the Wagner home has been partially corroborated by neighbors, several stating that they saw a pretty blonde girl in the rear yard. One witness, living on Van Yost avenue, and whose rear yard looks directly into that of the Wagner home, will testify positively to that effect.

Mr. Thomas Reardon, also living on Van Yost avenue, will give the same testimony. All the Misses Wagner are dark complexioned. Mr. Wagner's father, Dr. George B. Wagner, who died in an asylum, became suddenly unbalanced about the time of the tragedy.

Thieves were about on Wednesday night. They forced an entrance to Cawley's saloon and helped themselves to all the liquor they wanted. They also broke into Jerome Allen's residence and stole the solid silver table ware within reach, and from there they went to the residences of A. T. Kelly and Dr. Gobin and tried to get in, but failed in their efforts to loot these last two mentioned places they dropped the booty they had secured at Mr. Allen's, and it was found on Thursday morning and returned to the owner. No arrests; no clue to the guilty parties.

The address by Hon. F. D. Ader, before the Century Club and their lady friends, on Wednesday night, was an interesting and satisfactory exhibit of the legislation of Indiana in the decades last past in regard to women and their property rights. The subject was reviewed in all its bearings, and as well as the history of the legislation, were pointed out and fairly stated. Questions asked by the club were answered and the matter was warmly discussed. The address was an able one, worthy the occasion, and the hearers enjoyed it thoroughly.

Sudden Death.

On Thursday morning Mr. Flem. McCray, of Monroe township, was in this city, enjoying his usual health. About noon he returned home and partook of his noon time meal as usual, and made no complaint of ill health. Not long afterwards he arose from a chair in which he had been sitting, and started to the verandah, but fell by the way, dying almost immediately. The cause of death is said to have been heart disease. Mr. McCray was one of the old-time and well-known residents of Putnam county, and he had a large circle of friends, who with the stricken family mourn his sudden demise. Deceased was 80 years of age.

Republican Congressional Convention.

It was held at Martinsville, on Thursday last. The whole affair was cut and dried beforehand, and all that was necessary was to convene and say yea to the program prepared. Charles Case, of this city, was the Chairman of the convention, and made that same old speech, with slight variations, is the report from one who was there. Congressman Faris was renominated by acclamation, and made the usual speech of thanks. Hon. Jesse W. In a jolly and pleasing manner, his many friends were invited in on sight, and regaled with refreshments, cigars, etc., and a right royal time was had. The day was warm, the sun was hot, the breeze was balmy, and the festivities were conducted in the door yard.

The hypocrisy of the Republicans, as shown in the Banner-Times in its attack on the prohibitionists is so plain that answer is scarce necessary. The fellows who are howling loudest about prohibition candidates voting at a Democratic primary, are the very fellows who urged the prohibitionists to take part in the late Republican city primary, and added the information—"we want you to help nominate the man you want for councilman, and if you don't get the man you want, you are not bound, and need not support the nominee." It is not our fight but justice demands that B-T be called to very close account at last!

Dr. Mary Wood-Allen, National Superintendent of Purity, (of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union), gave to Greencastle audiences two very rare lectures, April 13 and 14, on themes of very grave import to all parents. We believe this noble woman has been divinely called to tell people the things about life they ought to know. She left her very fellow who might devote her life to the interests of humanity, and Indians feels that she has been favored to have this woman of God within her borders for one month. We wish it were possible to have her here to counsel her, and profit by the thoughts presented, for certainly the future citizens of our State would be the purer thereby. We wish to have heard the noble thoughts of this consecrated woman!
